OLD ST. STEPHEN'S MAKES WAY FOR CHANGE

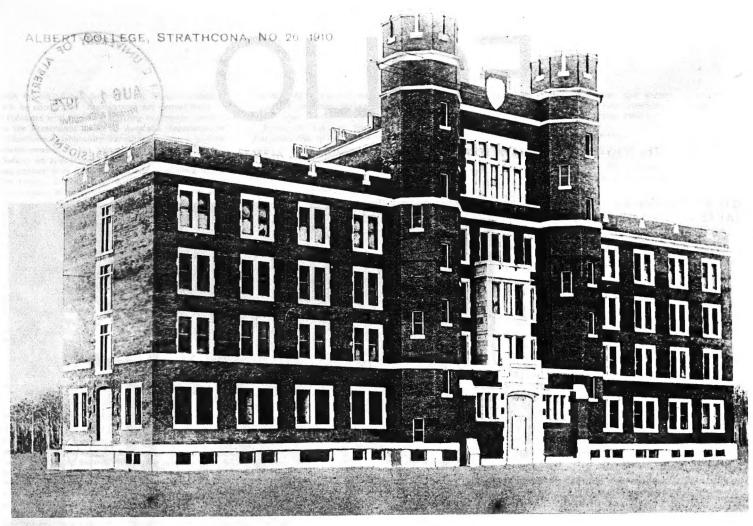

I myself have been a landmark The energy and excitement of this University is something I have always shared. Precisely what will happen to me as a building has yet to be decided. After all, one who has seen so much change, and thrills to its possibilities, will hardly claim immunity to change. But I do believe that the purposes for which I was established sixty years ago will continue to find expression on this spot of land. That is St. Stephen's College speaking in the small pamphlet, "The Story of St. Stephen's," published on the occasion of that building's diamond jubilee in 1970. Now, in 1975, when early in the week tenders for the demolition of St. Stephen's will likely have been invited, the old building must certainly prepare itself for a change. And it must prepare itself for thinking of its purpose in a largely different way. Rather than being the oldest building on campus, it could well become the newest parking lot on campus.

Since 1910, St. Stephen's has served many purposes on campus to the benefit of the University and the community. Mainly a theological college and residence, St. Stephen's has also been a convalescent hospital for veterans of World War I from 1917 to 1920; home of the Number Two Army Training Corps during World War II; during the thirties and forties, the south wing was the University of Alberta's nurses' residence. More recently, with the relocation of the college's classes and administrative offices in 1972 to the new St. Stephen's, built directly south of the old one, the offices of the Alberta Child Development and Research Foundation found a place in the old building. In fact, the availability of St. Stephen's was instrumental in allowing the Foundation to become established. As well, the old college has been home to as many as 70 or 80 University students per year, mainly from overseas.

When the new St. Stephen's was built, it was decided by the College which owns the building and property that old St. Stephen's would be demolished. The reason was simple—as a residence it was losing money in competition with other residences such as the Lister Hall complex. The building was in need of repairs, and the College could not afford them. At the last minute, the Alberta Child Development Printed by the Printing Department ographic lab work by Technical Services and Research Foundation, with the aid of provincial grants for repairs, arranged to lease the main floor for offices and agreed to maintain two other floors which were used as student residences. The foundation, however, found that it could no longer afford to maintain the building other than in the areas it used for offices. Their three-year lease expired in June, and when a proposal was made to the college for a new lease to rent only the space they needed for offices, their request was rejected.

No one, it appears, wants to take responsibility for St. Stephen's. Maybe no one can. The University has been approached several times in the last few years to take over the building as a residence or for overflow classrooms, but officials felt that to bring it up to proper standards St. Stephen's would almost have to be re-built. And there is no money for such an undertaking. St. Stephen's officials have indicated that in order to bring the building up to city safety standards, the installation of smoke detectors at a relatively low cost of $30,000 to $35,000 would be required. While the College is unable to fund the installation, the University is not satisfied with this solution.

Of course, St. Stephen's is just a big old building. To some it is possibly an eye-sore; to others, it may not be an eye-sore but simply a structure which has lost its usefulness. There are those who believe that St. Stephen's may not have outlived its usefulness. Most of the students living there are from overseas and, because overseas students often have special problems in finding adequate, inexpensive housing, the college has served to relieve some of the pressure of scarce housing. Rents are low and there is a noticeable lack of the kind of discrimination that is all too common in landlords elsewhere. The University's Foreign Student Advisor, Ruth Groberman, is concerned about the loss of St. Stephen's residence. Certainly there is a critical need for extra housing. As it is, University officials have determined that they can no longer condone the building's use as a student residence and the necessary funds required to renovate it are simply not available.

As for its appearance, St. Stephen's may not be such an eye-sore on a campus of primarily new buildings unless one has no eye for the sort of character and aesthetic which comes from history and tradition. There are few buildings on this campus which are expressions of tradition, reminders to the present of other times, and of the continuity between those times and ours. Possibly, the knowledge that St. Stephen's is, in all likelihood, to be demolished, makes the sense of loss more acute and emphasizes the feeling of the past which is there almost palpably. Nevertheless, once it is gone, it will be gone, and much more than an old brick building will be lost.

APPOINTMENT

Margaret Ellis has been named Chairman of the Department of Educational Services in the Faculty of Physical Education. Dr. Ellis completed specialist training in physical education at Chelsea College of Physical Education, and obtained a Teacher's Certificate from the University of London. She also received her MA and PhD from the University of Iowa. In 1964, after teaching for several years in England, Dr. Ellis joined the staff of the University of Alberta. She served as Acting Chairman during the 1974-75 academic year. The five year appointment became effective July 1.

VISITORS

Heinz Dicker, recipient of a Volkswagen Foundation fellowship for the study of educational administration, was a visitor to the Department of Educational Administration during July. Dicker is one of a small group of individuals in West Germany who are involved in empirical studies in educational administration at the Institut fuer Sozialforschung u. NOTICES

GENERAL FACULTIES COUNCIL COMMITTEE VACANCIES

The GFC Nominating Committee is seeking nominations for the following committees:

- 1. Selection Committee for Chairman of the Department of Political Science;
- 2. Selection Committee for Chairman of the Department of Drama.

Regulations governing the composition of selection committees for department chairmen require that one member, not a member of the department concerned, be elected by General Faculties Council.

- 3. Ad hoc Committee to Examine Writing Skills of Undergraduate Students—the composition of this ad hoc committee has not yet been established, however, interested persons are invited to submit nominations pending formalization.
- 4. Committee to Investigate Teaching—one undergraduate student member required. Those who have suggestions for nominations or who are interested in serving on the above committees are requested to contact the Secretary of the Nominating Committee, Mrs. P. Campbell, 2-1 University Hall, 432-4965.

INTERPRETING THE WOODS AND FIELDS

The University Department of Extension is offering a four-day field-lab course from August 19 through 22. The course will be of interest to teachers and leaders of children's groups who wish to improve their skills and knowledge of planning, organizing, and teaching outdoor education programs to children.

The instructor is Mrs. Joy Finlay, outdoor education consultant to elementary schools and outdoor leadership programs. The teaching method will concentrate on "learning by doing." Brief lectures will provide theoretical background for the field experience. The program will be held rain or shine in three different locations: the city school yard or corner lot, urban natural parks, and rural undeveloped areas. Participants should bring appropriate clothing for changing weather conditions; also lunches and coffee. An overnight camp is part of the program and participants are responsible for their own sleeping bag, shelter, and food.

The cost of this course is $42 and includes laboratory equipment and reference material. Registrations are accepted at 228 Corbett Hall. For additional information please call 432-3035.

BANFF FESTIVAL PERFORMANCES

The 1975 Banff Festival will again feature major performances of opera, drama, musical theatre, ballet, concerts, and recitals. The public is welcome to attend a number of free activities such as workshops, readings, and exhibits of painting, weaving, ceramics, and photography.

This year Festival officials announce new performance hours—major performances will begin at 8 p.m. The one exception is on August 9. The program for that evening features the Gala Faculty Concert at 7 p.m., and du Maurier's Jazz Evening with the Phil Nimmons Quartet at 10 p.m.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA MANAGEMENT

The Cultural Resources Management Program, Banff Centre, is offering service programs for the professional cultural management sector. These programs include case studies, lectures, workshops, and audiovisual presentations by course directors and selected resource people.

The first seminar involves Symphony Orchestra Management, and takes place from August 25 to 29. It will be of interest to general managers, board members, and operative staffs of professional, semi-professional, and community orchestras. Topics such as new funding techniques, budgeting and fiscal management, programming, promotion and marketing will be treated. The faculty for this seminar includes such people as Stephen Adler, public relations officer of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra; Michael Allerton, general manager of the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra; Audrey Michaels, symphony orchestra and artists' agent in New York; Boris Brott, conductor; plus many more.

Enrolments are limited. The cost is $180 with accommodation at the Banff Centre extra. For further information write: Wendy Bradley, Co-ordinator, Cultural Resources Management Program, The Banff Centre, Banff, Alberta T0L 0C0; phone (403) 762-3391 local 370.
